NEW RESOURCES AVAILABLE FOR UNION COUNTY ENTREPRENEURS AND SMALL BUSINESSES

Union County entrepreneurs and small business owners now have additional options when it comes to business assistance. The Union County Economic Development Partnership, through the Union County Small Business Incubator, provides resources to entrepreneurs and small business owners to ensure their long-term success through workshops, resources, advocacy, and networking events. The program also serves as a liaison between the public and private sectors to support grassroots innovation and economic development.

The Marysville Entrepreneurial Center (MEC), which headquarters the operations of the Incubator, is located at 128 South Main Street in Marysville. The MEC is available to anyone who needs help to develop a business concept, business plan, marketing techniques and business strategies. The MEC also provides office space and flexible workspace. Through partnership with the Small Business Development Center at Columbus State Community College, and TechColumbus, these programs are being provided to Union County residents free of charge.

Future plans for the Union County Small Business Incubator program include the development of an Agricultural Incubator, to assist and inspire innovation and advancement in agricultural technology, and a GreenTech incubator, to support the development of alternative energies, research and development, and companies that foster the development of green-collar jobs.

For more information, call the Union County Economic Development Partnership at 937-642-6279.
